1130 - 1230 hrs Plenary Session 2: “AI for Business and Societies: Opportunities and Regulations”

Artificial Intelligence (AI) is one of the biggest technological breakthroughs of the 21st century and touches upon almost every sector of the Indian economy. The rise in digitalization and globalization has opened new avenues for AI to reshape economies in a transformational and innovative way. Technology is altering the world and is impacting society, economies and governance as never before. Hence, countries and businesses are fast waking up to utilize the potential of AI which is finding an application in diverse sectors such as retail, finance, manufacturing, healthcare, IT and e-commerce, agriculture, waste management, etc. However, AI's proliferation also warrants thoughtful regulations to address ethical concerns, data privacy, and algorithmic biases. This session will discuss and deliberate on how to reap the opportunities and address the challenges that AI has brought for Business, Talent, Societies and Environment.

Programme

1500 - 1530 hrs Standalone Session on “Key Priorities for Sustained Global Economic Recovery”

High economic growth is needed not only to deal with issues such as poverty and unemployment, but also to generate the resources required for meeting SDGs and dealing with climate change. However, various global factors have led to contractionary monetary policies which are adversely affecting global growth. This session will focus on how we can prioritise global growth and what roles governments, multilaterals and businesses can play.

- Nirmala Sitharaman, Hon'ble Minister of Finance & Corporate Affairs, India
- N Chandrasekaran, Chair, B20 India and Executive Chairman, Tata Sons, India
- R Dinesh, President, Confederation of Indian Industry (CII), India

1530 - 1630 hrs Plenary Session 4: “African Economic Integration: An Agenda for Global Business”

Currently home to over 1.3 billion people, Africa's population is poised to nearly double by 2050. This demographic growth translates into an expanding consumer base and a growing young workforce, presenting vast market opportunities for goods and services. By recognizing Africa's economic potential, fostering trade and investment, investing in human capital and innovation, and promoting larger sustainable development, the international community can forge partnerships that benefit not only Africa but the global community as a whole. The aim of this session is to deliberate on the significance and role of international cooperation, led by businesses, in creating an enabling environment for growth and development in the African continent. Africa can be part of the G20 grouping for its effective economic integration.

1630 - 1700 hrs Plenary Session 5: Standalone Session on “Preparing the World to Address Global Cyber Security Risks”

Rapid advancements in technologies like AI, Machine Learning, and Deep Learning have expanded the cyber threat landscape like never before. With malicious threat actors getting increasingly sophisticated and innovative, the traditional approach of relying only on perimeter defence mechanisms no longer suffices to protect sensitive data. To fortify our digital world against these ever-evolving threats, our risk mitigation approach should be a multi-faceted one, combining advanced cryptographic solutions, continuous awareness and education, and global collaborative efforts. This session's deliberations would be centered around addressing these issues, including building a safer digital ecosystem to ensure a secure and sustainable global cyber landscape for generations to come.

1230 - 1315 hrs Plenary Session 9: “Balancing Growth and Inclusivity”

To be sustained over a long period of time, the growth process of any country must ensure that it benefits every individual and reaches out to every enterprise. It must be regionally equitable as well as globally and sectorally stratified. Least developed countries (LDCs) face particular challenges in enabling robust growth forces and shifting to more productive sectors that will boost incomes and generate better quality jobs. Micro, small and medium enterprises, which comprise the majority of businesses in economies across the world, can deliver major gains, provided they are empowered with finance and digital resources, including for startups and youth entrepreneurship. Women-led development has the potential to unleash a new wave of growth with their greater participation in the economy. This session will explore how best to foster growth drivers that will balance growth and inclusivity and empower all to lead a better life.

1515 - 1545 hrs Plenary Session 11: Standalone Session on “Revitalising Global Economic Growth and Financing for Climate Sustainability Transition”

The world needs higher economic growth to lift the standard of living for billions of people. However, this growth must come in a climate sustainable manner. This requires multiple transitions and interventions, such as the energy transition, reskilling and relocation of displaced labour from polluting sectors, building green infrastructure, adoption of clean technology and green practices, etc. The financing needs for these actions are huge. This session will focus on how the objectives of growth and sustainability can be aligned and revitalised and how sustainability financing can be strengthened.

- Mark Carney, UN Special Envoy for Climate Action and Finance, Co-Chair, GFANZ and Chair and Head of Transition Investing, Brookfield Asset Management

1545 - 1615 hrs Standalone Session on “Aligning Education to Emerging Imperatives”

The educational ecosystem of the future will be impacted by multiple factors including work definitions, emerging new sectors, technology advances, climate change action, and so on. Youth entering the workforce as well as people already in occupations and professions will need to adapt themselves continuously to align with transformations in the way the world learns. Digital and cross-border jobs will also redefine the delivery of work, necessitating new parameters for recognition of educational qualifications across countries. The session will take up issues of new educational policies, continuous learning and emerging challenges of aligning curricula to emerging industry imperatives to enable inclusive growth and higher incomes, especially for women.
